* Photoshop Elements.
Photoshop's companion app, Photoshop Elements ($79.99 as of press time), has a more limited editing capability. But it's a fairly affordable alternative to Photoshop and is ideal for people who may not have the budget to get the full Photoshop experience. *

The GIMP. The free GIMP (GNU Image Manipulation Program) is an open-source alternative to Photoshop that's available for multiple platforms. It offers layers, filters, and the ability to color grade images. GIMP also includes many features that Photoshop does not. # THE POWER OF LAYERING If you want to know what Photoshop is about, just watch the introduction video to Photoshop Elements (Figure 7-1 and the New Layer Dialog \(\text{Video 02}\)."). The New Layer dialog that appears is the closest thing Photoshop has to a bread-and-butter feature. It allows you to select a group of pixels or create a new layer to make changes to. For example, you can flatten all the layers so that they act as one transparent image, or you can select individual layers and change their Opacity, Color, or other properties. Figure 7-1. When you first open the New Layer Dialog (Image→Photoshop→New Layer Dialog, or in older versions, Image→Layer→New), what's important is the New Layer button, which is at the top right of the dialog (Figure 7-1 and the New Layer Dialog \(\text{Video 02}\).").

Similar By day I'm the sardonic door-to-door sales trainer and all-around how-to guy. Nighttime is a totally different ball of wax. I'm one of those guys, like the paragon of the plumber or the woman of your dreams, who are completely un-self-aware at times. I recently had this epiphany after being catcalled all day. Where am I to go? Where am I to hide? These questions kept asking themselves in my head. I realized I was helpless. The femme fatale was playing her deadly game. I'm likely as easy a target as the rest of men. On that day, a couple of women ordered me to hang out with them. I didn't want to. I wanted to hide from the catcalls. I thought about going home but didn't want to face my wife at that moment. So I hung out and they closed a deal. I was tricked. I was no match. Fast forward to the next night: I met up with some old buddies and we just hanging. It was around midnight and I was walking home. I spotted two parked cars that were not parked in the right places, so I gave them a little soft honk. They both got out and my buddy said, "I just had to run into you." Heh. We fist-bumped and I was done with the world. Then I saw this woman. She must have been 30 or 40 and was walking alone. She wasn't a vampire. She wasn't spurned. She wasn't ashamed to be seen. She was just walking, probably looking for a cab, probably just hanging out with friends, not really doing anything. She was just out of my reach, so I just smiled and gave her the long thumbs up. She stopped and smiled in return. "How you doin'?" she asked. I stopped and said hi. We exchanged name, made conversation and moved on. Everything I learned, from the time of my epiphany up until now, about women I should know, I learned from women. I think I'm becoming one of those guys who has a bit of a "woman's lib"-ish view of women

We have a corporate version of Office designed with a Corporate look. It includes new animations for emails that may not be used in the home version of Office. Is there a way to maintain that same theme (such as the non-corporate version)? A: Yes it is possible, you just need to know how to do it. I have never tried this. But, I have a tumblr called visualoffice. If you check it out, you'll see what I mean. It's a pretty good resource for this sort of thing. I have yet to discover any way to use Excel for the corporate look. There are probably tricks out there somewhere that you can learn from. Q: Python random choice from file I am trying to randomly choose 10 numbers from a list. The file is named Numbers.txt, with two columns: one line is a random number and the other is a random number. The problem is that, the random function only chooses from one line in the list.

import random
with open('Numbers.txt') as f:
    for line in f:
        list = line.split()
        random.choice(list)
        print(list)

This is the file I am reading in. I wish to pick random numbers from the second number in the list. line 1: 6 2 line 2: 10 1
