The effects of the 5-HT_{1/2} receptor antagonist metergoline (40 micrograms/kg i.p.) on the locomotor stimulant effects of ethanol (2.5-10.0 g/kg i.p.), gamma-hydroxybutyric acid (GHB) (40-160 mg/kg i.p.), and apomorphine (0.5-1.0 mg/kg i.p.) were investigated in male rats. It was found that metergoline attenuated the locomotor stimulant effects of GHB and apomorphine, but enhanced the locomotor stimulating effects of ethanol. This suggests that metergoline induces its ameliorative effect on behavioural inhibition by attenuating 5-HT functions more selectively than other neuroactive substances, and that it may be clinically useful in the treatment of alcohol-related disorders. Q: How to restart application form main thread in C#? I've just started working on Windows Forms and have hit a brick wall. Basically I want to create a "on click" event for something specific on my form and then kill off the form window and re-display it. So if it's possible, what I'd like to do is "start a method in the background, kill off the form, and run the method". I've done this successfully in WPF with the Dispatcher and am hoping to continue using this method for the rest of my applications. In short, I want to be able to restart a form (and content) from another thread without shutting down the whole application or creating a new instance. This is what I've written so far for the click event. Is there a way to modify this to do what I want? using (Forms.Application.Run(form)) { ... } Update: I think I might have to abandon this idea for the moment. 648931e174
